

Fire Extinguisher Training

Do your employees have the training, knowledge and confidence to react safely and avert injury and property loss should a fire situation occur in your workplace?

Health & Safety Regulations require that “The employer should ensure that employees are suitably trained in the use and operation of portable or other fire fighting equipment provided at the place of work” (Guidelines for the provision of facilities and general safety and health in commercial and industrial premise; 1.17, Fire Precautions).

Fire & Hazard Training Services have been offering workplace fire safety training in Canterbury since 1997. Our qualified team of instructors have extensive practical fire-fighting experience that adds value to your training Experience.

Courses can be tailored to suit individual workplace situations and are delivered using current technology and environmentally safe practical techniques and equipment.
